The aim of this study was to determine the efficacy of a psychological intervention to reduce weight. A design with experimental and control groups was used. After the intervention, there was a significant difference in weight loss between the groups, the experimental group showing more weight reduction than the control group. Also, an increment in self-esteem was found in the experimental group after the intervention.

Keywords

Self-esteem; Obesity; Psychological intervention; Weight reduction.