Abstract

Studies about the quality of journalistic information like the one presented in these pages- contribute to a reflection about the informative function of the media and make it possible to reveal what values in the news media were taken into account in every journalistic decision during the selection process of the events and the creation of the news. The advantages that citizens and the media can obtain with this kind of analysis of information are the following: a) greater trust and credibility, respectively; b) better access to information sources: not all of them inform the same thing in the same way; c) better quality of life: quality information contributes to social development and to democracy.
