Abstract
A representative sample of 430 radio spots, 1,664 taking into account their broadcasting frequency, has been characterized through variables such as the type of radio station, the time slot and the kind of product that is advertised. The obtained results are projected on the socio-demographic profile of the radio audience in Spain, characterized in this case by the variables age, role, and social class.

Keywords
Radio, advertising, radio spot, audience.