Abstract

The present article presents the analysis of a case in which the implementation of the information technology impacted a market that to that moment thought protected. It is interesting to observe as a traditional product, with many years in the market and with a path of quality and trustiness tested, is impacted in a direct way by a new way to conceive its functionality through the application of the information technology.

Keywords