Abstract

Every social system has its own idea on the basis of power legitimacy. The reasons to accept power structures depend on specific circumstances; and then the reasons, of political obedience in a determined society not necessary are the same of all others.