Abstract
This paper talks about the values that have incised in the construction of the indigenous political mobilizations at Latinamérica, in the last times, from the case studies of the Tawhka indigenous movement, human group that live in the Central America jungle of the Mosquitia, situated between Honduras, Nicaragua and the Caribbean Sea.

Keywords
Social movement, indigenous people, tawahkas, political speech, political opportunities structure, mobilizations strategy, Latinamerica.