Abstract

This paper carries out a small analysis around some of the propositions of Michel Foucault and Latin American cultural studies around the nietzschean proposal of use of a personal language. It ties the thinking of novelty with the act of knowledge and the experience.