The paper proposes to walk along the boundaries of those bodies assumed as abnormal, around the axe abnormality, transgression, flight. This approach, enacted as provocaction, aims to unveil discriminatory and excluding logics, as well as being a transformative praxis of power relationships. The paper remains open around the researchers’ transformation axes, the revaluation of feeling against rationality, the investigation’s findings as a provocation in itself and the power relationships exercised through the abnormal bodies.

Abstract

The paper proposes to walk along the boundaries of those bodies assumed as abnormal, around the axe abnormality, transgression, flight. This approach, enacted as provocaction, aims to unveil discriminatory and excluding logics, as well as being a transformative praxis of power relationships. The paper remains open around the researchers’ transformation axes, the revaluation of feeling against rationality, the investigation’s findings as a provocation in itself and the power relationships exercised through the abnormal bodies.

Keywords

Abnormality, transgression, flight, provocation, exclusion, bodies.