From the concept and theory of public policies, the article seeks to show the importance of the application of the analysis model, it being an articulator of the technical and political rationality in decisions about public matters. This analysis model is also a new contribution from political science to understand the action or lack of action of the state in its relationship with civil society. On the basis of a methodology fundamented in the historical perspective, we are trying to make possible the reconstruction of the process -rising, formulation, implementation and evaluation- from the different position takings of the state in the resolution or management of situations that pass to become socially problematic. The proposal of application of the model was made around the public policy Prevention of Forced Displacement, Attention and protection for the Refuge Population in Colombia as a contribution to the development of investigation in this field.
