Abstract
The dogmatic study of the criminal type for human trafficking will facilitate the overcome of interpretative problems of real concourse and apparent crimes. Likewise, that precision of the conduct will facilitate the investigation and eventual prosecution of the conducts that constitute human exploitation under the several modalities of trafficking.

Keywords
Trafficking, Sexual exploitation, Labour exploitation, Modalities of trafficking, Contests crimes.