Abstract

In the present article we propose, through an analysis of the inter-temporal individual trajectories, to identify and quantify the urban population vulnerable to the risk of unemployment and poverty. In order to carry this analysis we mobilise all the existing statistical data in Colombia. Such analysis may contribute to enrich the debate on policies aimed at benefiting social groups vulnerable to poverty and unemployment risks.

Keywords

Vulnerability, unemployment, poverty, Colombia.