Abstract

In this article, we try to present the transformations of family in Colombia, particularly with regard to the practices of rising, game and the transformation of toys, and finally, the constitution of the speech of socialization, in the period between 1968 and 1984. These changes facilitated the conditions for the passage from the modern childhood to the contemporary childhood, which at the present time is recognized as an independent subject inside the family, the school and the society as a whole.
