Abstract

It is presented a recount of the findings obtained in the process of investigation oriented by the Psychosis and Psychoanalysis group, having into account the contributions that the group has seen, regarding the psychoanalytical perspective as an alternative pro the establishment of the social bond of the psychotic patient. The work was done on the Nazareth Hospital, program Ecotherapy, 20th locality of Sumapaz, Bogotá; it was performed with 64 psychotic subjects on individual and group sessions for a period of 11 months. Oriented from the Lacanian conceptions, once a week discussions with investigators from the group were done, in which the obtained records from the clinical work were articulated with the analytical theory; from such analysis it could be concluded that through a guided work from the Lacanian analytical device, in group and individual spaces, it was potentiated the emergence of signifiers, of processes of the order of identification and work around the body, its uniqueness and recognition, that gave account of the establishment of the social bond.
