Abstract
This article explores several contemporary currents of cultural and literary analysis, that as a result, shows a theoretical and methodological void. This void is filled by approaching the dialectical sociology, which assumes the literature as its object of study in accordance with processes of socialization.

Keywords
Dialectics * object of study * sociology of literature * social classes * socialization