Abstract
This paper describes the evolution of public opinion, during the Referendum campaign over CAFTA. The data is based on telephone national surveys and includes the level of information, possible effects on the person interviewed, on the country, on its welfare State and on poor and vulnerable groups.

Keywords
Costa Rica, referendum, CAFTA, referendum campaign surveys, small farmers, small business, employment, welfare, sovereignty.