Abstract

Internet constitutes a new context, which provides new settings and frameworks both for education, educational guidance and learning. This paper introduces some of the effects of Internet on the teaching-learning processes and on the formation and professional training for educational guidance.

Keywords

Internet, learning, educational research, educational guidance, e-learning, e-education.