Abstract
Fashion and mass media are social core elements with an educational function that may even replace the educational frames provided by the family. The social effects of mediapower are shown to be negative: young citizens do not like topics of public interest, they are only interested in consuming and they believe that their own destiny does not depend on their personal decisions but on higher social power.

Keywords
Citizens, Civic Humanism, authentic, ethic, virtue