Abstract
This article serves as a critical analysis of case law from constitutional courts of Italy and Spain regarding protection of individual parliamentary mandate and focuses on the changes within the status of parties and the minority-majority discussion of modern parliamentary systems.

Keywords
Parliamentary mandate; Fundamental rights; Political parties; Constitutional courts.