Abstract
Hope, as any other common human experience, becomes a question and a task which, when it tries to materialize, receives different answers. The religious answer appears today, in a secularized world, characterized by finding in God its deepest and final ground.

Keywords
Hope in the Bible, secularization, promise, demythologizing.