Abstract

The article focuses on the cultural codes involved in the construction of models of female beauty in today and how these affect the behavior of middle-class youth living in the City of Buenos Aires. Between the principal topics we investigate in what measure the young women feel addressed by the aesthetic models spread by the mass media and what degree of influence they practice in the configuration and social production of the bodies and juvenile subjectivities.

Keywords

YOUTH, WOMEN, CORPORALITIES