Abstract
This paper discusses the importance of teacher’s reflection facing the challenges, both conceptual and practical of the curriculum. It invites teachers to become agents that reflect and understand the epistemological and psychological foundations of the curriculum, in order to make new propositions, changes and constructive criticism that will benefit the entire community.

Keywords
Curriculum, teacher, reflection.