Abstract

The present article shows the definitions offered by Henry Mintzberg in relation with strategy, as well as all existing schools the author has identified in connection with this field of study. Then, some research niches are identified in this field, linking the definitions of Mintzberg with the concept of power distance used by Hofstede.