Various studies have clearly shown as one of the most significant problems linked with the entrepreneurial development the lack of specialized mechanisms for the financing process of the new and the already existing companies. This article explains the reasons to support this process as well as the existing alternatives in the world to give objective solutions to these current problems. Finally, some reflections and conclusions are given on a specific Colombian case study.

Abstract

Various studies have clearly shown as one of the most significant problems linked with the entrepreneurial development the lack of specialized mechanisms for the financing process of the new and the already existing companies. This article explains the reasons to support this process as well as the existing alternatives in the world to give objective solutions to these current problems. Finally, some reflections and conclusions are given on a specific Colombian case study.

Keywords
Financing, risk capital, investing Angels, Start Up, entrepreneurship.