Abstract
In this paper, a feasibility study of the investment project on the new production facility of the growth enhancer known as FITOMAS E is done using the COMFAR III Expert program, that permits, as well, to do sensitivity and risk analysis to show the variations of financial indicators due to changes on the product price or production cost to determine the most risky economical factors of the project. This is very helpful information in the project investment process for decision making.

Keywords
Investment projects, financial indicators, sensitivity, risk.