Abstract
Religious of the Sacred Heart of Jesus applied for aid in the clinical and social diagnosis of a group of 39 children, whose mothers were heads of households belonging to a low resources community, affected by various types of disabilities. The aid to this community was presented as a research project to the University and won the first call for project support to Social Budget St. Francisco Javier generated by the Chancellors of the University. Due to the incomplete clinical attention, and the high cost of consultations and special examinations required for their disabilities, those children needed to justify their disability to the health system in order to ensure comprehensive care. Our approaches to solve those situation, included: recreational meetings, educational lectures, medical care, dentistry care and the use of specialized diagnostic tests as karyotype, and magnetic resonance images, among others. The process concluded with the delivery of a community social diagnosis.

Keywords
Consumer participation, disabled persons, community-institutional relations.