Abstract
The study aimed at learning about the care provided to people with hypertension in primary care from the perspective of health workers. The data was collected through focus groups in five cities in the northwest of the state of Paraná. It was observed that, although the study was conducted with teams of different municipalities, the meanings and perceptions regarding the care provided and the difficulties experienced are similar in many aspects. In general, the Basic Health Units meet the most urgent needs of users, despite the adoption of strategies for treatment adherence, for various reasons, cannot reach the entire population, undermining the quality of care, even with the commitment of the team.

Keywords
Chronic Disease, Hypertension, Family, Primary Health Care.