Abstract

In this paper an advance of more extensive work on state education policy that was developed for the basic level in the state of Puebla (Mexico) is presented, during the government of Guillermo Jiménez Morales, from 1981 to 1987. The paper considers three aspects of education policy in the state: the explicit educational purposes formulated and disseminated by the state authorities, the creation of secondary schools on television (telesecundarias) as an essential element analysis of this period and finally dataset published on the behavior of the educational system, in terms of enrollment, teachers, schools and education spending.

Keywords

Basic Education, Puebla, state education policy, secondary schools on television, Jiménez Morales, enrollment, education spending.