Abstract

Inside the Department of Documentation of Universidad Nacional del Mar del Plata in Argentina, the group called Jitanjáfora studies childrens literature and reading promotion. During the School Librarians Meeting that took place at this university in October last year, the group organized a workshop on youth and children Hispanic literature collections. This experience is presented in this paper describing not only the activities made with the librarians who attended the meeting, but also the conclusions and the critic and theoretical bibliography about reading, reading animation and several concepts of collection.

Keywords

reading promotion, collections, school librarians, university to society, training, children literature, Jitanjáfora Group, Argentina.