Abstract
This reflexion paper aims at discussing a number of issues that typically arise when performing empirical studies with software testing techniques. Though some problems are general to all empirical disciplines, software testing studies face a number of specific challenges. Some of the main ones are discussed below.

Keywords
Software testing, Software faults, Testing techniques, Empirical studies.