Abstract

This is the a case report of a 2 year old English bulldog bitch with 36 to 38 days of gestation, which displayed a bloody-purulent vulvar discharge and a lethargic condition, being these the only findings at the physical examination. After performing ancillary tests, fetal viability was determined in one of the uterine horns and the other horn was occupied by fluid.

Keywords

Fetuses, sonogram, uterus, vaginal discharge.