Abstract
The intention of the contribution is the systematization of the humanistic model of geographic thought, first to discuss the linguistic problem between humanistic humanist and like humanism expressions; to approach of general form the qualitative approaches and humanists in geography, including the humanistic point of view; to concentrate itself in the conformation of the humanistic approach developed by the geographers Anglo Americans; to watch the connections with the phenomenology and the existencialism; to explore in the humanistic meaning of?”place”, including a revision of the notion of place in the regional tradition; to investigate in the entailments of humanistic geography with cultural geography and, finally, to examine the connections between humanistic geography and environmental geography.

Keywords
Paradigm, Humanism, Geography, Geographical Thought