Abstract

Our analysis of yavi style ceramics from different sectors of the Province of Jujuy (Argentina) aims to show this styles spatial and temporal variability in areas surrounding its supposed place of origin. Evidence provided by Yavi vessels kept in different argentinian collections finally leads us to discuss the dynamics of social interaction involved in the circulation of ceramics in different places and periods.

Keywords

yavi style, pottery, circulation, social interaction