Abstract
This article analyzes, through the themes of light and shade, the two constitutive poetics of Nerudian poetry, their articulation and inseparability. The nocturnal I then appears as the fundamental poetic I in the degree to which it exorcises its own death transforming it into a gesture of knowledge.

Keywords
Poetics, light, shadow, knowledge, death.