Publishing Your Paper Online: What they don't teach you in nursing school you will learn with the OBJN

Isabel Cruz, RN, PhD. OBJN Editor

As a professional, you may have had to write a monography, a dissertation or a thesis. But that doesn't mean that you learned how to publish. If you do not publish you will perish as a researcher. If you do not know how to publish online you will be less cited!

You learned (or tried to) to do nursing research in your undergraduate or graduate courses. You received a lot of information on what a project and a scientific report should look like when finished, but little information on how to get them published in the Online Brazilian Journal of Nursing or other scientific journals.

The teachers did not include in their nursing research syllabi subjects as writing opportunities or writing style and structure of an article (except Dr. Vitória Secaf!).

For example, your research proposal was approved for a grant, but nobody told you that you could publish it as a "preview note" paper. But what is the order or the size of sections in a preview note? You don't know! What journal accepts a preview note? You don't know that either!

Now, your problems are over. The Online Brazilian Journal of Nursing will offer a workshop:

Publishing Your Paper Online!

The course is designed to show you how to complete the task easily. The first course will be held at Fluminense Federal University on April 20th, 2006. Discover the pleasure of publishing online and share your knowledge with health professionals around the world.
