Abstract
The idea of a centralized, hierarchic and distant government, it seems to give a step to styles of government characterized by the cooperation, the horizontal action and the mutual support with diverse sectors and agents of the society. Concepts such as governance, relational State, networking seem to gather this new reality. Like this, the most traditional theoretical approaches on governability prosper with the contributions on governance; in this respect, the central objective of the study is to establish the relationship between a certain governance’s structure and the governability’s level obtained. For this, the analysis is realized on a subsystem of public policy: the employment policy in Bogota during 2001-2006.
