Abstract
This article tries to analyse the Spanish position in international trade of fish products and its contribution to domestic supply. The extent of the period analysed (from 1995 to 2005) and the detail of the data (maximum level of detail, that is, to the level of the product) will allow to conclude that the dimension and strength of international trade of Spanish fish products is not due to conjunctural elements, but to an especific characteristic of the fishing sector globally considered that is solidly established.
