Abstract
Since it has imposed a unique agenda based on the war against terrorism, has the US consolidated its position as a hegemonic power? or with the rise of China and the constitutional integration in Europe can we foresee a new world order based on premises that differ from those inherited from the Cold War? If this is the case, where can we find Latin America?