Abstract

By trying to show the problems that for the freedom of the social subjects bring absolute and universal approaches in regards to truth, the rationale, methods and procedure of its production, and the use of information in the process of decision making. I propose a new approach to the role of modern expertise. It refers to a descentered position of expertise accordance with a critical and pluralist perspective in matters of social research and decision making. This approach is illustrated with examples of different proposals, particularly my own methodological perspective which is applied in the evaluation of issues on social justice in Bogotá, Colombia.
