Abstract
The Network for Advanced Schools in the use of ICT, redTIC, emerges in 2004 as a national initiative driven jointly from the central government, through the Public Entity red.es, and from the education authorities of 11 Autonomous Communities: Aragon, Asturias, Balearic Islands, Canary Islands, Cantabria, Castilla-La Mancha, Castilla y Leon, Catalonia, La Rioja, Murcia and Valencia. This network was created with the main objective of responding to the questions that appear when trying to integrate ICT in teaching and learning in an effective manner. This article arises in order to publicize the initiative and its route.
