Abstract

This article presents a study in which the performance of several queries involving GROUP BY clause, sub-queries (using IN and EXISTS clauses) and joins are measured and compared by means of specific queries. The behaviour of relational and object-relational models is also shown.

Keywords

relational and object-relational databases, tuning, SQL, Oracle.