Abstract

The antecedents and contexts of the origins of the behavioral movement in Peru, are presented. The role of organizations and academic and professional institutions that influenced the training, development and diffusion of behavioral psychology in Peru, is described. The main scientific articles and books published, and the papers delivered at the National Congresses of Psychology, with a behavioral approach, are presented. The work carried out by behavior analysts took place mainly in the clinical and educational context. Finally an evaluation of behavior analysis in Peru, from its origins to the current state and its future perspectives, is presented.

Keywords

behavior analysis, behaviorism, Peru