"In recent years an evolution about socially responsible management is presented. It has placed the company as the core and around it 7 main stakeholders: shareholders, environment, customers, employees, community, government and civil society. Today we know that the company put the focus is not sustainable over time" ("Peru 2021 Corporate Social Responsibility Model. Vision 2050", <http://www.peru2021.org/principal/categoria/modelo-de-responsabilidad-social-empresarial/8/c-8>. Visited December 1, 2015).

In 2010, the World Business Council for Sustainable Development - WBCSD launched the Vision 2050 to achieve a sustainable planet within the limits of what we can supply. About 9 groups considered of interest : values of people, human development, intangible economy, agriculture, forestry, energy and power, buildings, mobility and materials.

"Based on these pillars, the traditional model of RS should consider the country as central and companies must understand and adapt its role to sustainability that take years and years. The task of incorporating a business is socially responsible management model to obtain clear answers and appropriate stakeholders with which it interacts".

Within this framework, the magazine contributes Industrial Data research contributions made by national and international researchers in order to achieve sustainability of the companies not only in time but also with the country and the planet.
