Abstract

The Knowledge society is based on the growing importance of the service sector in the whole economy. Knowledge intensity and technology intensity variables make up a range of services showing differential characteristics such as the geographic concentration level of these sectors. In the present article we analyse the concentration trends in knowledge and high technology intensive sectors, taking into account variables such as the number of companies, employment and wages and salaries.

Keywords

Knowledge economy, knowledge intensity, technology intensity, high technology, concentration.