Abstract

Through the analysis of the actual scene around the public demonstration against our political administration and its way to engage with the citizenry, this article aims to observe the particular views of how our local experts and academics perceive our urban history as city, our current situation on the line of urban planning, the challenges for the future and our condition in connection with other cities from a local point of view, which represents, an unwell feeling on how people conceive the city today.

Keywords

Political neglect, centralization, urbanism, social imaginary.