Considering a data base on Regional Collective Action Facts for the period 1995-1997, a set of characteristics for the local society is proposed and supported on quantitative information. Among them, the reduced networks of conflict and violence, the prevalence of a urban and differentiated criminality, above all organized crime, and the weakness of non institutional collective action linked to possible social movements.

Abstract

Abstract

Considering a data base on Regional Collective Action Facts for the period 1995-1997, a set of characteristics for the local society is proposed and supported on quantitative information. Among them, the reduced networks of conflict and violence, the prevalence of a urban and differentiated criminality, above all organized crime, and the weakness of non institutional collective action linked to possible social movements.

Keywords

Collective Action, Social Change and Region, Social Conflict and Violence, Criminality.